I am Associate Professor at the Department of Philosophy and Education of the University of Turin. I teach History of Philosophy in MA and BA programs, and I am a member of the Board of teachers of the FINO PhD Program in Philosophy. After studying at the Universities of Turin, Helsinki (Finland), and Reading (UK), I took my PhD at the University of Turin in 2005, and was appointed Assistant Professor (Rtd-B) at the Department of Philosophy and Education of the University of Turin in 2016.

My areas of specialization are the history of analytic philosophy, with a special focus on Wittgenstein and Wilfrid Sellars, and the application of distant reading and other quantitative methods to the history of philosophy. My areas of interest are, more in general, the history of contemporary philosophy, metaphilosophy and philosophical methodology, and the digital humanities.

In these areas I have written three books and published articles in international journals such as The British Journal for the History of Philosophy, Synthese, History of European Ideas, History of Philosophy Quarterly, Theoria. A Swedish Journal of Philosophy, Philosophia. A Philosophical Quarterly of Israel.

In the field of the history of philosophy, I have been working on the following lines of research: on the reasons and causes of the decline of Wittgenstein in the history of analytic philosophy I have written my PhD dissertation, and published several articles and two books: Dimenticare Wittgenstein. Una vicenda della filosofia analitica (Il Mulino 2009) and Analytic Philosophy and the Later Wittgensteinian Tradition (Palgrave 2020, History of Analytic Philosophy series). A third book, Storia della filosofia analitica (Carocci 2015), and Biblioteca analitica. I testi fondamentali (Carocci 2020), recently edited with Guido Bonino and Carlo Gabbani, are different attempts to tell a comprehensive story of analytic philosophy, whereas a monographic issue of Philosophical Inquiries, edited with Guido Bonino in 2018, is devoted to the history of recent or late analytic philosophy, i.e., analytic philosophy in the last forty years. Other articles and contributions focus on the philosophy of Sellars and on analytic metaphilosophy (e.g., "Peter, Stephen, … and Ludwig", 2011, which provides a critical assessment of Timothy Williamson's *The Philosophy of Philosoph*y, 2007; see also Williamson's Reply to Tripodi in the second, 2021 edition of his 2007 book).

In the recent years I have been focusing on the application of distant reading and other quantitative methods to the history of philosophy, very broadly conceived, so as to include the history of ideas and the history of scientific thought. In 2016, together with Guido Bonino and Enrico Pasini, I have founded the research group DR2, Distant Reading and Data-Driven Research in the History of Philosophy. My activity in this field has included: publishing several scientific articles (among them Bonino and Tripodi 2020; Bonino, Maffezioli and Tripodi 2021; Bonino, Maffezioli, Petrovich and Tripodi 2022); developing a web of collaborations (not only with philosophers and historians of philosophy, but also with computer scientists, computational linguistics, sociologists, historians of economic thought) in Europe and beyond; teaching several courses on "Distant reading in the history of ideas" at the Department of Philosophy and Education of the University of Turin, at the Scuola di Studi Superiori "Ferdinando Rossi", at the Language Technologies and Digital Humanities course of the University of Turin, as well as in PhD programs both in philosophy and in the digital humanities; being part of the scientific board of DISH (Center of Digital Scholarship for the Humanities, University of Turin) and being the editor of the series DR2 Working Papers (Accademia University Press); organizing, and participating to, several international conferences and workshops; being funded by private foundations and university competitive grants.

In what follows, a detailed list of academic appointments, research prizes, awards and funding, recently organized events, professional activities, and referee duties.
